Event Description: The Cash for Kids event sells numbered tickets. The stub of each ticket sold is placed into a pill bottle that is placed in a rotating drum. As the event goes a board member draws from the rotating drum and hands the bottle to another board member to open and hand to the announcer. The announcer calls out the number and a volunteer takes the number off the board. The accountant and the executive assistant both document throughout the evening to insure accuracy. The final ticket left on the board wins the grand prize.
