SAMUEL F. PERKINS

was born July 1, 1833, and died at 7:15 o'clock, P. M., June 9, 1885, in the fifty-second year of his age. He had been for some time seriously afflicted, yet his death so soon was not expected and was a severe shock to his family and to his large circle of friends.

In Williamson county where he was born his whole life was spent, and his remains lie at rest in the family burial ground. It is with peculiar sadness that we realize the fact that he is no more. He is gone from us. Almost in the prime of life he has been stricken down.

When a man dies, out of sympathy for those who are bereaved, his enemies are silent, and his friends are ever ready, with a word of commendation of his virtues. But where can one man of his acquaintance be found who could say ought against his character?

Upright and honest, with indeed a high sense of honor, a man of the strictest integrity, of refinement of feeling, he was incapable of any mean act. It is almost impossible for a man to live in a community for fifty years without incurring the ill will of some, but if Sam Perkins ever had an enemy the writer of this has never known him. Liberal hearted, generous to a fault, and kind, he had, to an eminent degree, the characteristics which endeared him to those with whom he came in contact. A man with considerable force of character, positive convictions, and a strict adherent to what he conceived to be honest. He was true to his friends, and doubtless had as many as any man in Williamson county.

When our friends die we are naturally disposed to speak in extravagant terms of their virtues, and our love gives a coloring to what we say. We all have our faults it is true; yet there are many who have known him long and well that will cheerfully testify to the truth of everything that is said here. He had the respect of all who knew him, and the ardent love of many friends. He was a kind-hearted man, refined, respectful of others, an affectionate son, brother, husband and father.

The last few years of his life particularly were spent almost exclusively in the bosom of his family. There is expressed a pall of gloom and sadness, the extent of which can be known only to those who have been accustomed to see him in the family circle. They have the sympathy of an entire community, and may the Giver of all good give to them that consolation which He alone can give. II nessec.

We regret so much to see the notice in your paper of this week of the death of Sam'l F. Perkins, Jr. He was one of the noble works of God—an honest and upright man in all his dealings. It was our privilege to mix and mingle with him in early life. In the school room and in mature years few men was his equal in all that constituted a model gentleman. Peace to his ashes.

Miss Anna R. Hand

HENDERSON-PERKINS.—On last evening at 7 1/2 o'clock May 21st, the relatives and a few invited guests gathered together at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Perkins, six miles west of Franklin, to witness the marriage of their beautiful and accomplished daughter, Miss Lizzie, and Mr. John H. Henderson, a prominent young lawyer of the Franklin Bar. The ceremony was performed by Elder E. B. Coyce. The following couples were the attendants upon the happy pair:

Park House with Miss Robbie Hunter; Judge H. H. Cook with Miss Theresa Pendleton, of Nashville; Park Marshall with Miss Sue Henderson; Joe B. Campbell with Miss Jennie Claybrooke, of Triune; T. J. Turley with Miss Katie Baxter, of Nashville; Samuel Claybrook with Miss Corinne Glass; Bruce Hughes with Miss Jamie Watson; Wm. White with Miss Sadie Marshall.

As these eight beautiful women, leaning on the arms of their chivalric Knights, entered the parlor, reminding one of the trusting confidence and splendid strength of the ivy and the oak, we could but recall as we watched the elegance and taste of their toilette the quotation that "Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as one of these."

It makes the hearts of the old companions of the bridegroom sad when they first realize that they have lost him as one of their old boys. But when we remember that he has entrusted his heart and his destiny in life to the keeping of one of earth's rarest flowers, and a little "Woman just suited to his mind," we can say with joyful and grateful hearts: "Well done, old companion; enter thou into the bliss of the matrimonial state." We have known the bridegroom for years, and we can congratulate the well-deserving bride upon her choice; and we can say that she has won one of earth's truest noblemen—a Christian gentleman in whom there is no guile, and a man that has a future bright and prosperous before him.

The bridegroom has plucked the fair rose that many have attempted to win and wear. And although he has waited long, still he has proven by his choice that he has waited well. He has proven that he is not "dead to the music of a woman's voice," nor "blind to the sunshine of a woman's eyes." Although society has lost one of its greatest favorites, whose place cannot be filled, still we know that the bride will reign as a queen over the happy home as she did over those that were associated with her in the "past that is no more." We will miss the silver laugh hereafter at our gathering—but it will still make the fireside of her home beam with brightness, around which no shadows can gather.

"Across the threshold led
His house she enters, there to be a light Shining within, when all without is night;
A guardian angel o'er his life presiding,
Doubling his pleasures and his cares dividing."
