BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

First and Downtown Presbyterian Churches of Nashville, Tennessee

The First Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tennessee, was first organized in 1814. Work on the first church building was started in 1812 and finished in 1816. It was a colonial style, brick church and it held about 400 people. On the front steps of this church, Andrew Jackson was presented a ceremonial sword by the State of Tennessee for his victory at the Battle of New Orleans. A fire on January 29, 1832, destroyed this structure and work was started on a second church building. The second structure was completed in 1833. The second church building was done in the classic Greek style. It seated 1000 people. This church building hosted the gubernatorial inauguration of James K. Polk. On September 14, 1848, the second church building was also destroyed by fire. This fire was reportedly started by workmen who were repairing the tin roof. The third church building was built in 1849 with the corner stone being laid on April 28, 1849. It is of the Egyptian Revival style and was designed by William Strickland, who also designed the Tennessee State Capitol building. Work on this church was not easy and it took longer than it should have to complete due to a Cholera epidemic which swept through Nashville and caused work on the church to be suspended. This church was dedicated on Easter Sunday, April 20, 1851. When this building was first built it had seating for about 1200 individuals. During the Civil War, the Union Army used the building as a hospital. In 1867, the church bell was purchased and donated to the church by Adelia Acklen Cheatham. Between the years 1870 and 1890, this bell served as Nashville's fire alarm. In 1927 and 1937, flood victims came to the church for shelter. During World War II, soldiers, on leave in Nashville, slept in the church. In 1954, a majority of the members of First Presbyterian Church voted to move the church to land it had purchased in the Oak Hill area. The members voting against the move, fearing that the historical downtown building would be torn down to make way for a parking garage, started a campaign to raise money to purchase the downtown building. They succeeded and purchased the historical structure. In 1955, the Downtown Presbyterian Church was formed. A Yoke Ministry was created between First Presbyterian Church and Downtown Presbyterian Church in 1983.
