INTRODUCTION

This collection is composed of papers of several related families prominent in the business, educational, and social life of Nashville, Tennessee, and their forbears in New York and New Jersey.

The materials in this collection measure 1.68 linear feet. There are no restrictions on the materials.

Single photocopies of unpublished writings in the Margaret (Warner) White Papers may be made for purposes of scholarly research.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Margaret (Warner) White Papers, spanning the years from about 1777 to 1962 and containing eight volumes and about 200 items, are composed of accounts, an appointment, Bible records, clippings, correspondence, documents, genealogical data, an invitation, a land grant, a memorial, a postcard album, school report cards, four scrapbooks, a sketch, and writings pertaining to the related families of Berrien, Lawrence, Lindsley, Philips, Warner, and White.

The letters of earliest date are those of Nathaniel Lawrence (native of Long Island) who served in the Revolutionary War. He was captured and confined on a prison ship for two years. After the war he practiced law and later served as attorney general for the state of New York. His health was impaired by his long imprisonment and he died when only thirty-six years of age. Seven letters written by him from 1781 to 1793 are in the collection. One letter, April 6, 1781, addressed to Nathanael Greene, asks for information as to his place in Greene's command after his "long and disagreeable captivity." Another concerns the grants of land to Revolutionary War officers by the state of New York. The other letters are of a miscellaneous nature. There are fifteen letters written by his wife Eliza (Berrien) Lawrence from 1789 to 1792, while on trips to her parents' home "Rockingham" at Rocky Hill, New Jersey. It was at this home that George Washington dictated his Farewell Address to the American Army. Maintained today as a historic shrine by the New Jersey Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, it is called "Washington's Headquarters."

The Lawrence's daughter Margaret Elizabeth (1793-1845) married, in 1813, Philip Lindsley (1786-1855) who in 1822 was the Acting President of the College of New Jersey (Princeton) and in 1824 accepted the presidency of the University of Nashville. Included in the collection are four letters, 1848-1854, written by Lindsley while away on trips to his daughters at home in Nashville. One dated October 28, 1848, mailed from Louisville, Kentucky, speaks of how very crowded the river boats are and of the millions of (passenger) pigeons seen; the one of May 23, 1851, from Madison, New Jersey, describes his mother's home; and one of February 1, 1854, tells of his mother's death.

Included are eighteen letters written by Philip's son John Berrien Lindsley from May 1, 1848 to October 2, 1848. Fifteen were written home to his sisters in Nashville while he was on a trip east to pursue his study of geology. He traveled by way of St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, and Buffalo, and visited many cities in New York and Massachusetts. He climbed Mt. Washington and "laid in quite a good supply of specimens of the rocks of that region which though as common here as our limestone, will appear quite graceful in a western cabinet where they will be foreigners." He attended meetings of the Association for the Promotion of Science in New York City. He also visited Quebec and other places in Canada.

John Berrien Lindsley's daughter Margaret Lawrence married Percy Warner. Included are eleven letters from Percy Warner's father, James Cartwright Warner, written during the years 1853-1888. Seven, written in 1853, are concerned with his move to Chattanooga with his bride to start a mercantile business. These are addressed to his wife's aunt, Martha (Philips) Martin. He describes his business success, the little city of Chattanooga with its very high rents, and their plans to build a home. The four later letters, 1884-1888, were written from Europe where Mr. Warner had gone for his health. He had suffered from neuritis for many years.

Other family letters include one from Margaret Elizabeth (Lawrence) Lindsley, wife of Philip Lindsley, to her daughter at Bon Air Springs, White County, Tennessee, telling of her youngest child's serious illness; and one from Philip Lindsley's eldest son, Van Sinderen, in Nashville, in 1848, reporting to his father how much money was realized by a sale of lots belonging to the University of Nashville.

Miscellaneous correspondence includes 18 letters spanning the years 1784-1940. One of the earliest is that from Elisha Williams to Joseph Philips (1763-1822) in 1802 regarding the purchase of a horse named Coeurdelion (sic) for $2,000. This Elisha is probably the father of Josiah Williams (1786-1851) who married, in 1815, Margaret Philips (1799-1844), daughter of the above Joseph.

There is a letter of introduction for James C. Warner written by Bishop Charles Todd Quintard in 1884, addressed to Edward Harcourt, M.P., Oxford, England. Included is one letter of Henry Watterson written April 10, 1865 from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Mr. Warner, regarding affectionate remembrances of their family ties and associations in Chattanooga before the war and his coming marriage to Mrs. Warner's niece, Rebecca Ewing. After the war, Watterson served as editor of the Louisville, Kentucky Courier-Journal for fifty years.

Included with a few accounts are two that concern Lieutenant Nathaniel Lawrence: one from the Office of Accounts, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, August 23, 1782, which gives the time period of his captivity by the British, June 1, 1779 to March 17, 1781, in computing pay owed to him. The other account is a copy of that kept by his father of cash advanced to him at several times from the time of his exchange to the time of his return home after the peace.

A small handmade notebook that belonged to Margaret Elizabeth (Lawrence) Lindsley contains but two notations: the amount of money left her by her step-father, John Lawrence, 1836; and legacy left her before that by her uncle, Thomas Lawrence.

The one appointment in the collection is for Nathaniel Lawrence, March 5, 1795, to be "one of the agents appointed by the Governor to confer with the Indians now here..." No location is given but it is probably Albany, New York.

Bible records include a copy of the record from the Bible of Percy Warner which was presented to him by the employees of the Nashville Railway & Light Company on January 5, 1903, as a token of high esteem; and one page from the White family register, the earliest birth noted being that of W. White born October 1811.

There are miscellaneous clippings, in the main pertaining to people and places in Nashville. One concerns Andrew Jackson and "an almost forgotten attempt to kill the Leonine President." It is a newspaper copy of a letter written by Congressman Edward Howell (1792-1871) describing an attempt on the President's life in Washington in 1835.

Included with miscellaneous documents is a notice, ca. 1777, to the electors of the city and county of New York signed "An Elector," recommending several men as representatives in the state legislature who will counteract "the dark and wicked anti-federal plots..." and "will ensure to us wise and equal laws." Among those suggested are William Livingston, Alexander Hamilton, and William Duer.

Other documents pertain to various members of related families in various locations. One of the earliest is dated September 24, 1790, signed by James McGavock, authorizing stock to be paid to James Dean from his stock in Cumberland in repayment for what he had received from him. There are two marriage licenses, 1800 and 1802, signed by Andrew Ewing, Clerk, Davidson County, Tennessee; two oaths of allegiance to the United States taken by James C. Warner in 1863 and 1864; and a certificate for “Companion J.C. Warner,” in 1861, electing him Grand Scribe of the Most Excellent Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the State of Tennessee.

There is a limited amount of genealogical data on the William White (1811-1850) family of Franklin, Tennessee. White married Mary Minor Bennett and included are a few notes on the Bennett family. Included also are some notes on the related family of Johnston (John Johnston, 1734-1816).

In the collection are two invitations: one, 1899, from the Colonial Dames of the State of New York to Mrs. Percy Warner; the other, 1900, for a reception given in honor of Admiral and Mrs. Dewey in Nashville.

The one land grant in these papers is a copy of a land grant from King George II to Henry, George, and John Thweatt, 1737, Prince George County, in the colony of Virginia.

There is a memorial to Elizabeth (Berrien) Lawrence (1762-1799) probably copied from her tombstone.

Included is one photograph, taken about 1891, of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Warner with their three eldest grandchildren: Sadie Lindsley (Warner) Frazer, Mary Louise (Warner) Lea, and Margaret (Warner) White.

One album contains postcards obtained by Mrs. White in 1933 after a trip to Hawaii, the Chicago International Exposition, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Printed matter includes a card of appreciation to Percy Warner from the Casino Orchestra, Glendale Park, Nashville; a circular of the American Temperance Union, ca. 1836, in regard to alcohol and the United States Merchant Marine; pamphlet “Damning Revelations of Germany’s Turpitude” reprinted from Manufacturers’ Record, May 9, 1918, in which August Thyssen, one of Germany’s greatest steel manufacturers, says that the war was started by the Hohenzollerns for the maintenance of their autocratic military power; and an undated account taken from the April issue of the Nashville (Tennessee) Journal of Medicine and Surgery praising the election of John Berrien Lindsley as Chancellor of the University of Nashville.

School papers include six report cards: four for Margaret Lindsley (Warner) White in 1881 at Dr. Blackie’s School for Girls and Young Ladies, Nashville; one for Sadie (Warner) Frazer, 1897, at Ward Seminary, Nashville; and one for her sister Mary Lousie (Warner) Lea, 1898, at the same school.

There are four scrapbooks in the collection. Volume I belonged to Mrs. James C. Warner and contains clippings pertaining to the iron industry in which her husband was active. Volume II, dated 1885, belonged to Mrs. Percy Warner. It has clippings on various subjects such as the University of Nashville; The Protestant Orphan Asylum; “The Hermitage” restoration; William Walker; her husband’s great-great-grandfather Robert Cartwright, etc. Volume III also belonged to Mrs. Percy Warner. It has clippings of her wedding in 1884 at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Berrien Lindsley, Nashville; the Warner Furnace, Hickman County, Tennessee; Nashville Railway & Light Company; Percy Warner Park, Nashville; and family obituaries. Volume IV was kept by Mrs. John O. White while a student at Ward Seminary, Nashville. Included in it are some graduation programs, 1903-1908; congratulatory telegrams; a few First Presbyterian Church bulletins; and clippings of her debut and the marriages of her two elder sisters.

There is a sketch of the Warner Parks of Nashville which tells of their genesis and the men responsible: Percy Warner, Edwin Warner, and Luke Lea. The article, by Louise Davis, appeared in the Nashville Tennessean Magazine, July 21, 1963.

Included are three little volumes with original poems, notes on sermons heard, etc., written by Margaret Elizabeth (Lawrence) Lindsley from about 1805 to about 1833; and lectures on moral philosophy probably written by Philip Lindsley. There are also other miscellaneous poems, authors unknown. One of special interest is entitled "On the Resignation of his Excellency General Washington."

There is a copy of a talk given in 1925 to a DAR group by Margaret Lindsley (Hoyte) Hicks (ca. 1850-ca. 1930), in which she speaks with admiration of early Americans and their accomplishments. She deals particularly with her own family in New York and New Jersey, members of the Lawrence, Berrien, Lindsley, Condit, Fish, and other families. She comments on her ancestor's pioneer spirit from John Alden to Philip Lindsley, the latter leaving the presidency-elect of Princeton to accept the presidency of the University of Nashville in 1824.
