INTRODUCTION

The Samuel Cole Williams Papers (1765-1947) are centered upon the life of Samuel Cole Williams (1864-1947), attorney, Associate Justice of the Tennessee Supreme Court and historian of Johnson City, Tennessee. The donor of the collection is unknown.

The material in this collection occupies 3.36 linear feet of shelf space.

Single photocopies of unpublished writings in the Samuel Cole Williams Papers may be made for purposes of scholarly research.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Samuel Cole Williams Papers containing approximately 800 items, span the period 1765–1947. The collection consists of accounts, cards, clippings, correspondence, court records, diaries, memoirs, etc., genealogical data, land records, legal documents, lists, notes, photographs, sketches, writings and several miscellaneous items.

A large part of the collection is composed of notes taken by Samuel Cole Williams on the early history of Tennessee. The notes, often taken on the back of correspondence, blank checks, or scraps of paper, cover a wide range of Tennessee topics and famous pioneers, including the Cherokee and Chickasaw Indians, the State of Franklin, Moses Fisk, Colonel William Christian's expedition against the Cherokee in 1776, Nathaniel Gist, Fort Loudon, William Tatham, Henri Timberlake and the Watauga settlement. These notes served as research material for the many books and articles published by Williams on various aspects of Tennessee history.

The newspaper clippings provide sketches on many well known Tennesseans such as Andrew Jackson, Alvin York, et al, as well those who have been generally neglected. In the latter category we find short biographical accounts for Solon Borland, an editor, soldier, statesman and Minister to Nicaragua; Mrs. Lindsay Patterson, author and social worker of East Tennessee; and many others.

Correspondence generally consists of letters from historians or archivists responding to William; search for data for his Tennessee history manuscripts or genealogical inquiries from family researchers who have read an earlier work by this East Tennessee historian. Although many of the correspondents submitted family history data with their letters of inquiry, it appears that Judge Williams had little interest in pursuing genealogy outside of developing family background information on famous early Tennessee pioneers.

Prominent Tennessee correspondents which are found in the collection are: Penelope J. Allen, Douglas Anderson, William E. Beard, Prentice Cooper, Will Allen Dromgoole, Walter W. Faw, Henry H. Horton, Andrew Jackson, Ray H. Jenkins, Jim McCord, Kenneth McKellar, John Trotwood Moore, Mrs. John T. Trotwood Moore, Robert T. Quarles, Jr., Dan Robison and Ambrose Hundley Sevier.

Researchers searching for genealogical data on noted early Tennessee settlers will appreciate the amount of information available on such families as the Thomas Hardeman, the Isaac Lincoln, the James Robertson, the Griffith Rutherford and the Isaac Shelby. The family histories are often supplemented with biographical sketches of well known early Tennesseans.

The Williams' papers also include writings in manuscript form on a diversity of Tennessee topics, ranging from "Eighteenth Century Prison in Kentucky and Tennessee" to "The Pioneers of Carter's and Holston Valleys".

The Samuel Cole Williams Papers are valuable to both the student of early Tennessee history as well as to genealogists seeking to locate their Tennessee ancestors.
