INTRODUCTION

The Weems Family Interviews collection consists of taped interviews with various members of the Weems family. The Weems family was originally from Tennessee, but most members of the family settled in Maryland, which is where the interviews took place. The interviews concentrate on the life of Phillip Van Horn Weems, a noted inventor and aviator. Phillip Van Horn Weems was known for creating various instruments that were used as navigational aids by pilots, as well as authoring several books regarding aviation. Additionally, the interviews talk about other family members and the various activities associated with their lives.

The interviews in this collection were recorded on reel to reel tape, with audiocassette copies created from each reel. The originals have been retained. There are no transcripts available for this collection.

For additional information on the Weems family, please see the George Hatton Weems Papers, and the P.V.H. Weems Papers.

Please note, this collection is housed in the cold storage vault. Please allow 24 hours for tapes to acclimate before using this collection.
