INTRODUCTION

The Dyas Collection centers around John Coffee (1772-1833), Clerk of the County Court of Rutherford County, Tennessee; General in the War of 1812; Commissioner to treat with the Chickasaw and Choctaw Indian Tribes; and Surveyor-General of the Mississippi Territory and Alabama lands.

The John Coffee Papers were given to the Tennessee Historical Society by Robert Dyas of Florence, Alabama.

The materials in this collection measure 10.08 linear feet. There are no restrictions on the materials.

Single photocopies of unpublished writings in the Dyas Collection – John Coffee Papers may be made for purposes of scholarly research.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Dyas Collection of John Coffee Papers for the period 1770-1917, containing approximately 6,000 items, is composed of accounts (bills, notes, receipts); correspondence; military papers (payrolls, muster rolls, appointments, orders, quartermasters accounts); legal documents (court case briefs, depositions, indictments, judgments, and summonses); biographical and genealogical data; Cypress Land Company records; clippings; sketches; diary extracts; Indian treaties; wills; estate papers; land records (surveys, grants, warrants, deeds, indentures); Andrew Jackson papers (accounts, correspondence, land documents, etc.); Joshua Coffee papers (accounts, land records, legal documents, military records, etc.); Martin family papers; Donelson family papers; Hutchings papers; school records; writings; and some miscellaneous items.

This collection is composed primarily of correspondence for the families of Coffee, Donelson, Dyas, Hutchings, Jackson, Martin, and other miscellaneous correspondence. Approximately 1,000 items make up the correspondence of John Coffee, bulk of which is incoming and includes 185 letters written to John Coffee by Andrew Jackson. The correspondence deals with the following subjects: military matters; Battle of New Orleans, 1815; Indian treaties with the Cherokees, Chickasaws, Choctaws, and Creeks; surveying Indian lands; land speculation; Cypress Land Company; Cotton Port lands; national politics with special reference to John Quincy Adams, John C. Calhoun, Henry Clay, William H. Crawford, and Andrew Jackson; the Eaton affair; James Jackson's accusations; Tennessee politics with special reference to John Bell, William Carroll, Felix Grundy, and James Winchester; portrait painter Ralph E.W. Earl; National Portrait Gallery; Alabama lands; cotton crops; Colbert's lands; salt speculation; Lafayette's visit; University of Nashville; the town of Florence, Alabama; murder of Patton Anderson; Burr conspiracy; and others.

John Coffee's outgoing correspondence is largely to members of his family. Eleven letters written to his son John Donelson Coffee are concerned with his son's school work at the University of Nashville and make references to Dr. John Berrien Lindlsey, Gerard Troost, and others. In one letter from Washington, D.C., he wrote his son concerning the speeches of John C. Calhoun and Daniel Webster. Eighty letters to his wife contain information about troop movements in the War of 1812; burning Indian towns; General Winchester's defeat; Jackson's maneuvers; East Tennessee troops and General Cocke; death of his wife's brother; building of Fort Strother; General Hall's brigade; description of the battle of New Orleans; Indian treaties; the Colberts'; friendly Indians; General Pinkney; land speculation; nullification; Calhoun and Webster's speeches; surveys; and family matters. Coffee wrote Andrew Jackson Donelson about his Indian dealings; candidates for office in Alabama; Eaton affairs; Duff Green's opposition to Jackson, etc. Principal correspondents are William Preston Anderson, James L. Armstrong, James Bright, George Washington Campbell, Charles Cassedy, John Donelson, Sr., Lemuel Donelson, William Donelson, John H. Eaton, Eli Hammond, Robert D. Harris, S. Harris, Andrew Jackson Hutchings, Andrew Jackson, James Jackson, William B. Lewis, John C. McLemore, George W. Martin, John Overton, W.P. Owen, James Knox Polk, Benjamin L. Smith, and John Strother.

Other members of the Coffee family whose correspondence is represented in the collection are Alexander Donelson Coffee and John Donelson Coffee, sons of General John Coffee, and his wife, Mary (Donelson) Coffee. The family of Thomas Coffee, brother of the General, who lived in Pulaski, is represented by about thirty items written by his two daughters Mary (Coffee) Mays and Messaniah (Coffee) Wells-Moseley and several letters written to his son Joshua.

Approximately fifty items compose the correspondence of Alexander D. Coffee, son of General John Coffee. Letters written to him are primarily concerned with land, surveying, and other business matters. There is some mention of politics. The principal correspondents are Stockly Donelson, A.V.S. Lindsley, and Andrew J. McLemore.

There are about forty items addressed to John D. Coffee. Seven of the letters were written by Andrew Jackson and contain personal references about his dear friend General John Coffee and expressions of affection for the Coffee family. Other letters contain comments about politics and the candidates for office. Five letters were written by John D. Coffee to his father concerning his schooling at the University of Nashville; politics; the tariff; and the proposed land bill. In addition to the sixty-five letters written to Mary Donelson Coffee (Mrs. John) by her husband, there are twenty-three other letters written to her by various persons concerning the death of her husband, the schooling of her children and other family news. A few letters by Mrs. Coffee have been preserved.

Forty letters of the Donelson family are in the collection. They are written primarily to Andrew Jackson Donelson and Captain John Donelson, Sr., father of Mrs. Coffee, by various members of the Donelson family and a few others. They contain information about a land lottery; Sam Houston and his Texas schemes; Eaton affair; nullification; turnpikes; navigation; improvements; land speculation; Andrew J. Hutchings' suspension from college; Felix Grundy; Reverend Edgar; growth of Nashville; Mr. Lapsley; and family news.

The Martin family is represented by forty-five letters, primarily the correspondence of James G. Martin, who married Catherine Donelson, a sister of Mrs. Coffee. The letters contain information about the University of Virginia; trip to Germany in 1846; land grants; military affairs; land speculation; "Van Buren Jubilee"; politics; Whigs; Rhea County lands; Mexican War; description of Mexico; election of 1844; and family news.

There are ninety letters in the correspondence of Andrew Jackson Hutchings of which over half were written by Andrew Jackson. Hutchings was the ward of Andrew Jackson and many of the letters are in regard to his schooling and his father's estate. Other subjects discussed are the debts of Andrew Jackson, Jr.; death of Ralph E.W. Earl; sale of Hunter's Hill; Democracy in Alabama, Kentucky and Indiana; results of support of banks; and Eaton's return to the Whig Party. Five letters were written by John Donelson, an uncle of Hutchings' wife, Mary (Coffee) Hutchings, concerning Andrew Jackson; cotton crop; land prices; and family news. A few letters from John C. McLemore contain information about Texas lands and the opportunities there; and Memphis. Leonidas Polk wrote six letters to Andrew Jackson Hutchings during the years 1838-1840 concerning the manufacture and sale of bagging and rope. Other letters concern the Chickasaw lands and the Texas fever which was running high.

There are eighty-three letters listed in the miscellaneous correspondence. They are written by various persons to a number of different people concerning such subjects as Hardeman Academy; land sales; Chickasaw treaty; Cypress Land Company; the War of 1812 in North and South; and a number of other subjects. The Dyas correspondence is for the dates 1914-1916 and is primarily concerned with this collection of Coffee papers and arrangements for placing them in the collection of the Tennessee Historical Society.

In addition to the correspondence there are some papers of General John Coffee's father, Joshua Coffee. They include bills, notes, and receipts for the years 1770-1800; and records – grants, indentures, surveys; legal documents – court records, estate papers, promissory notes; military records – payroll and lists of soldiers, 1780; and bills of sale for slaves.

The Andrew Jackson Papers in the collection comprise approximately 100 items which have been separated because they do not deal with the Coffee family. There are a number of bills, notes, receipts, legal documents concerning the guardianship of Andrew Jackson Hutchings; land records; military records; sketches; seventeen letters, five of which were outgoing; and copies of correspondence between Jackson and Winfield Scott in regard to a controversial order of Jackson.

John Coffee was appointed Surveyor-General for the Mississippi Territory and the public lands of Alabama, as well as commissioner to lay down the boundary lines between Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee. A large number of surveys, surveyor's books, warrants, transfers, grants, etc., for the dates 1783-1808 are in the collection. The land records contain material about land speculation and there are records for the Cypress Land Company in which Coffee was a large stockholder. He had a number of land dealings with W.P. Anderson for which there are records. Approximately five hundred items are concerned with land dealings in addition to a large portion of the correspondence.

Much of the correspondence and other items deal with the Cherokee, Chickasaw, and Choctaw treaties. Coffee was sent as a commissioner to the Indians, having as his main objective to gain possession of their lands. In 1816, John Rhea and John McKee were appointed with him to treat with the Choctaws; in 1826, General Clark and General Hinds were his associates in treating with the Chickasaws and Choctaws; and in 1830 and 1831,

John H. Eaton was appointed to serve with him in treating with the Chickasaws and Choctaws. He was very successful in all of his negotiations with the Indians, and finally in 1832, he was able to make a treaty with the Chickasaws for all of their lands east of the Mississippi River.

The collection contains biographical sketches for John Coffee, the Marquis de Lafayette, Emily Donelson, John Donelson, Mary Donelson, Robert Dyas, Andrew Jackson, Rachel Jackson, Daniel Smith, William Carroll, Andrew Jackson Donelson, Stocky Donelson Hays, Robert J. McKinney, Ezekiel Polk, William Polk, John Reid, William Smith, and James Winchester. There are some estate papers for John Catron, John Coffee, John Donelson, John Hutchings, Stockly Donelson Hutchings, and Thomas Hutchings.

Genealogical data in the collection is for the families of Branch, Brown, Caffrey, Chester, Coffee, Donelson, Depriest, Duvall, Glasgow, Hays, Heard, Hutchings, Irion, Jackson, Knight, McGryor, McLemore, Major, Murdoch, Owen, Purnell, Ramsey, Saunders, Slocumb, Stockly, and Smith. There are obituaries for John Coffee, John Donelson, Mary (Donelson) Coffee, William Donelson, William E. Hinton, Stockly D. Hutchings, Rachel Jackson, Catherine Martin, and Willoughby Williams.

John Coffee's accounts are composed of bills, notes, receipts for lands, cotton, salt, food supplies, tuition, cotton factories, construction and building supplies for Florence Female Academy and the Florence Presbyterian Church, slave bills for sale, and accounts for the Coffee and Company mercantile business. In addition to John Coffee's accounts, there are records for Elizabeth Coffee, 1830-1832; Mary Coffee, 1824-1854; and F. Kemper, 1773-1797.

Some excerpts from the diary of John Coffee for the dates 1816-1826; information on the Nashville Female Academy and the Western Military Academy; sketches on several subjects; turnpike records; the wills of Joshua Cason and Charles Dickinson; pictures; clippings; horse pedigrees; and a copy of the unpublished dissertation by Gordon T. Chappell, entitled, "The Life and Activities of John Coffee," make up the remainder of the collection.
