INTRODUCTION

Record Group 121 contain the records from the renovation of the Tennessee State Capitol Building from 1953-1959, and 1986-1988. These records are composed of blueprints, correspondences, reports, contracts and some photographs. There is also a VHS cassette and DVD documenting the progress of the restoration of the Capitol during the second half of 1987.

These records were given to the Tennessee State Library and Archives by Jim Hoobler, Curator of the State Capitol, Tennessee State Museum. Some of these records came from the office files of Mike Fitts, State Architect for Tennessee.

The blueprints have been placed in the map cases of the Archives & Manuscripts Unit, TSLA located on the Eighth Stack, along with other blueprints of the State Capitol Building. All other original records are located on the Second Stack, TSLA and have been microfilmed (except for the blueprints). Any photographs and videotapes in this collection have been removed to the TSLA Vault. These have been consolidated into two boxes and one volume.

This collection is approximately 1.25 cubic feet in size.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection contains the record of the renovation efforts of the Tennessee General Assembly to restore the State Capitol Building of Tennessee during the mid-1950s and in the 1980s. In the early Fifties, the State Capitol Building was in a state of much needed repair and disorganization. In 1953, the General Assembly passed a resolution (HJR 29) which called for the implementation of a plan to renovate the interior of the Capitol, and the landscape of the Capitol grounds.

In the 1980s, a commission was formed with the intent to restore the State Capitol Building to its' original design as originated by architect William Strickland. The interior hallways, the State Library and the original State Supreme Court Chamber were restored during this period. However, because of funding cuts, the restoration of the House of Representatives chamber and the State Senate chamber were postponed.

Record Group 121 contains correspondence of the General Assembly's Legislative Council Committee in the early 1950s relative to the mid-Fifties renovation efforts, and has a book of photographs of the restoration of the exterior of the Capitol in 1957. These photographs were made by Charles Warterfield, one of the principal architects involved in the restoration effort of the middle 1950s. The Archives & Manuscripts Unit of the State Library and Archives also has a collection of photographs of Mr. Warterfield which also document the restoration of the Capitol during this period.

There are many blueprints of the Capitol renovation and restoration efforts, both of the 1950s and the 1980s restoration jobs. These blueprints are found in the map cases on the Eighth Stack of the State Library and Archives.

For further study of the State Capitol construction and renovation efforts, the researcher should also refer to Record Group 17: State Capitol Construction Records (1855-1860), Record Group 14: State Capitol Repair Records (1955-1960), Charles W. Warterfield Collection (MSS ac. no. 196) and William Strickland's original architectural sketches of the State Capitol of Tennessee (State Library Special Collections).
