Administrative/Biographical History

The Comptroller of the Treasury is a constitutional officer elected by the General Assembly for a term of two years. State statutes prescribe duties, the most important of which relate to audits of state and local government entities and participation in the general financial and administrative management of state government.

The Department of Audits is comprised of three divisions: State Audits, County Audits, and Municipal Audits. Considered a post-audit agency, the department audits an entity's financial statements and its compliance with applicable statutes, rules, and regulations at the end of the fiscal period.

The Division of State Audit conducts an annual audit of the Tennessee Comprehensive Annual Financial Report, which encompasses all departments, agencies, and units of the state, including community services agencies.

The Division of County Audits is responsible for yearly audits in all 95 counties. The division conducts audits or may accept audits conducted by public accounting firms. Those audits carried out by public accounting firms must meet standards established by the Comptroller of Treasury and are monitored in accordance with a four-year plan that is updated annually. In addition to certain county governments and most special school districts, there are numerous authorities, boards, commissions and agencies.

The Division of Municipal Audits ensures that municipalities, school activity and cafeteria funds, utility districts, and housing authorities are audited annually as required by state statute. These audits are performed by public accounting firms, and the state division reviews and approves them. Audit reports and working papers must comply with generally accepted state and federal government standards.
